total disappearance of political moxie, “experience,” professionalism, and/or organizational expertise in high office;

Whaaat? Need you be reminded that it has been exactly that – “political moxie and/or organizational expertise” (not to mention high IQs) – which have delivered us and all the rest of the world to exactly where we are right now? This “New World Order” of theirs is nothing more than the Old World Dis-Order – rule-by-the-few Oligarchy – but attired in a new costume. So to your objection we must say, “Wrong!”

total disappearance of political moxie, “experience,” professionalism, and/or organizational expertise in high office;

You already said that. But let’s get down to this “experience” in legislating and administering and to the skills of thinking and speech that you seem to associate with the business of governing. Not all politicians have been law-schooled or majors in “Political Science.” In fact, some have been politicians without any college degree at all. Our point is that there exists in this world no valid criteria detailing the difference between a good political candidate and a bad one. But when we talk about “democracy,” the essential element in any rule-by-law Republic, we then come face-to-face with the necessity for something at least close to a match between the persona of a line of presidents or an assembly full of congressmen and the persona of the public at large. If democracy (i.e., fairness) is truly the objective, then said officers should be representative OF the whole population being “represented.” So in your exalting of governing talents into the stratosphere, we must say you are Wrong!

“THE job.” You’re right, and that’s why “the job” itself would change. And we would suggest that, in said “changing,” all legislating and administering and adjudicating too would have to return to the strict boundaries delineated in the Constitution. No longer would “the general welfare” entail what Rep. Pete Stark called “most anything in this country” the federal government wants to do. Career politicians have long proven themselves disinterested in adhering to and greatly interested in venturing away from the Constitution. So in presuming that a “job” would remain as hopelessly gargantuan under BEL as it now is under Republicrat BEP, we must call you Wrong!

not just anybody can do all that presidents and congressmen are called upon to do;

Presidents are “called upon” to legislate, and congressmen are “called upon” to turn a blind eye to presidential war making, regulating as if law making, etc. Constitution-bound politicians-for-a-season are not likely as susceptible to such usurpations of power.

some people are physically, mentally, morally, illiterately, conscientiously or providentially unfit for government service;

Right. However, the one and only BEL system being proposed includes the practical deviation from puritanical democracy, that being a localized Draft Board not unlike that of the Military's Selective Service System dating back to the Vietnam years. Deferments, either temporary or permanent and either requested by the Board or by the potential candidate, would be issued so as to exclude all such handicapped citizens from the various candidate pools. It might not have worked perfectly during those earlier times, but some of the drafted soldiers did end up winning medals for acts of heroism.

BEL might be right in good-vs.-bad theory, but the thoroughly evil oligarches will use all their propaganda and then laser-guided powers to nip your "Rèvolution" in the bud;

Whether it be "God protecting fools" or "God blessing that which honors Him," either way we lovers of Liberty and Justice for all must never let ourselves be lured into their military arena where the settlement must be via War "games." But even with that point of Wisdom, it has always been their way to provoke us to violence, even if initiated by their own, Oligarchy-enlisted agents provocateurs so as to lend justification to their invasion outrages against us. Therefore, reliance upon God's miracles must be our prerequisite from this pre-revolutionary day and forever onward.

there's no use even thinking about BEL, because it's simply not going to happen!

Now we're right back where you started, at the cowardly knee-jerk stage. And if this "first reaction" is still your "last resort," then you are more than welcomed to "jump ship" – we don't need you. (And take your Jeanne Dixon crystal ball with you.)

However, if that old Bright-Idea "light bulb" has come on in your mind as a result of pondering this escape from Oligarchy of the Ages and venturing into the Justice of "democracy" and Liberty of "Republic" that are more than in-names-only, then we urge you not to "join with us" but, instead, to strike out on your own, launching a BEL website maybe, writing and publishing a BEL book maybe, converting other BEL subjects certainly and enlisting others into the BEL Idea, et al. If you're VISIONARY-enough to see it, then you're bound to be ACTIVIST-enough to do something for it.
